

CROP International Studies in Poverty Prize 2015

The Comparative Research Programme on Poverty (CROP), in cooperation with Zed Books, requests proposals for the CROP International Studies in Poverty Prize 2015.

We seek proposals for original, high-quality, alternative and critical academic book manuscripts. Works challenging the dominant thinking and knowledge about poverty and providing sound contributions to the eradication and/or prevention of poverty in our world are especially welcomed.

Poverty must be the central focus of the proposals. Innovative proposals are accepted from all disciplines of the Social Sciences and the Humanities. CROP is especially (but not exclusively) interested in the themes of Poverty and Human Rights, Gender Disparity, Policy Innovation and Global Justice.

CLOSING DAY FOR SUBMISSION OF ENTRIES IS 30th of November 2015

The winner of the CROP International Studies in Poverty Prize 2015 receives NOK 50.000 ($6,000). The manuscript will be published in the CROP International Studies in Poverty series by way of Zed Books. The winner also receives 10 copies of the book.

For further entry guidelines please see reverse.

Entry guidelines

Entries should be original and written in the English language.

They should not have been published partially or in full in any format, including electronically.

To submit an entry please complete a full book proposal. The proposals should be original and written in the English language.

Submission guidelines can be found here <http://www.zedbooks.co.uk/for-authors>. Submissions will undergo a blind, fair and unbiased, review by a panel of international judges.

The result of the competition will be announced simultaneously on the CROP and Zed Books websites in early 2016.

For editorial norms and additional information, please see www.crop.org or contact us at crop@uib.no

About CROP (crop.org)

The Comparative Research Programme on Poverty is a programme of the International Social Science Council (ISSC), hosted by the University of Bergen and devoted to supporting independent, alternative and critical knowledge and learning that can inform policy.

About Zed Books (ZedBooks.co.uk)

Zed Books is an independent academic publisher with a reputation for cutting-edge international publishing.