Internet links to the website of the responsible organization

There is no such website. The UK Data Service hosts the data with some documentation.

The frequency or repetitions of the survey. Possible explanation of this.

This was a one-time only study, conducted in 1993-1994.

A description of the survey's content, i.e. both focused rotational and / or core modules of the survey

The study focused in particular on public and parliamentary opinion in post-Communist countries. It covered social background, social and political participation, political interest, attitude to government, privatization, cultural issues, political corruption, voting, political protest, educational background, employment status, and other demographic questions.

An outline of the type of sample and the main data collection methods used

There is no recorded information at the UK Data Service about the sampling procedures employed. Note that there are two samples in each country: One for the general adult population and one for the national members of parliament.

Face-to-face interviews were conducted.

An account of availability of the data to researchers, restrictions on access, etc.

The data are freely available at the UK Data Service upon registration.
